NEW ENTRANTS ADD TO ZEST OF PRIZE CAMPAIGN

Race Still Young With Plenty of Chance for Recent Entrants To Finish as Winners

The Times-Gazette's great circulation campaign, in which a Nash sedan, valued at $1185.00 fully equipped, a Whippet Six Coach, fully equpped, and a radio set with the electrical equipment are the three grand prizes is just getting started now. There will be four other prizes, all good, but the cars of course are the prizes that candidates are hoping to win.

There are five more weeks after this, so if your name has not yet been entered in this interesting race, better send it in at once.

If you can only devote a small portion of your time to this work you can make a nice little sum of money for Christmas, as all candidates who do not win a prize will receive ten percent of all the subscription money turned in by them.

Extra Votes

This week candidates will receive 25,000 extra votes for $15.00 in subscriptions; 75,000 extra votes on $25.00 in subscriptions and 100,000 extra votes for $30.00 in subscritions.

Ask for some of these extra votes this week, as they may be the means of winning the cars.

The Standing

Mrs. George Steinberg of La Honda is leading the candidates this week, with Mrs. Amy Holmes of Redwood City second, and Miss Myra Smith of Menlo Park, third. Miss Lois Stebenne is second in Redwood City and Miss Charlotte Brown is third. Mrs. T. C. McGovern is fourth and Miss Angelina Bufa is next. Miss Helen Foster has many friends who are working for her, Miss Gertrude Cashman, Miss Alma Collins, Mrs. Eileen Adams, Mrs. P. P. Dougherty, Miss Delfa Hamilton and Mrs. Kincaid have all gained many votes this week.

New entrants are Miss Sarah Ward, Mrs. Josephine Baker, Miss Mary Marsh, Mrs. Stanley Woods, Mrs. J. Johnsson, Miss Leila Swett, Miss Peggy Boggs, Betty Shoemaker, Miss Margaret Thelcher, Dale Childers, Margaret Harrington, Miss Mary Winters, Miss Margaret Rocha, Mrs. S. J. Dalve and John Rocha of Redwood City; Mrs. E. H. Hara, Mrs. McAtee, Mrs. Jones of Menlo Park; and Mrs. Stanley Woods of Atherton.

Peterson Contesting Election of Hickey

The election contest entitled Frederick Peterson against Thomas Hickey will be heard today when the ballots cast in the first township for supervisor will be brought into court and counted. At the recent election Hickey defeated Peterson by 260 votes. Several hours will be consumed in counting the ballots.

Local Business Man Married Saturday

The Congregational church was the scene Saturday of the wedding of B. M. Carmichael of this city and Miss Evelyn Baker of Portland, Oregon. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Currie of the Congregational church in the presence of friends of principals. Mr. and Mrs. Carmichael were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Seeley as best man and matron of honor.

Mr. and Mrs. Carmichael will make there home in this city where Mr. Carmichael is district manager for the Maytag Washing Machine Co.

Auto Parts Store Opens on Highway

Robert Wood, who for the past 13 years has been engaged in the gear and auto parts business in San Francisco has opened a store at 751 Highway under the name of Redwood Automotive Parts. The store will carry a full line of automobile parts and accessories and will offer a quick service for all parts which formerly had to be ordered from San Francisco.

Boles Radio Den Changing Show Room

Workmen were this week completing the task of remodeling the display room of Boles Radio Den. The show room has been redecorated and refurnished and is now admirably calculated to display the fine model radios in which the store specializes.

City Council Receives New Charter Petition

A petition signed by more than 525 residents of Redwood City was presented to the city council at its regular meeting Monday evening by Merton F. Hughs, president of the Redwood City Promotion Association. The petition asked that an election be called at which a committee of freeholders be elected to study the needs of the city and prepare for adoption of a new city charter. The city government is now operating under a charter granted on May 3, 1897. The town was originally incorporated May 11, 1867, and for thirty years worked under its original charter.

The petition was received and filed by the city council Monday evening and Mayor Beeger promised that the matter would be given the immediate attention of the council.

Promotion Club and Chamber of Commerce Hold Joint Meeting

A joint meeting of the Redwood City Promotion Association and the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce was held Tuesday evening in the auditorium of the Central School. The meeting was called at the invitation of the promotion club for the purpose of discussing the proposed charter for Redwood City.

In a talk in which he traced the developments of the city charter idea in Redwood City and outlined the necessary steps for its consumation was made by E. R. McNee, secretary of the association. Talks in favor of the proposition were also made by Attorney A. J. Stebenne and Attorney James Davis of San Francisco.

The members of the chamber of commerce were welcomed by Merton F. Hughs, president of the club, and E. B. Hinman, president of the chamber of commerce spoke on the harbor development here.

An interesting feature of the evening was the piano solos by members of Miss Inez Jamieson's convent class. The meeting was followed by refreshments.

363rd Regiment Will Celebrate 10th Year After World War

The 10th annual reunion of the 363 regiment will take place in California Hall in San Francisco Saturday evening, September 29. This will be the anniversary of the date upon which this regiment went "over the top" in France and is made the occasion of the annual reunion. A ball will be held by the veterans at Puckett's Balconades the following evening.

John P. Cullen of 203 Phelps street has the tickets for these events for sale for this section of the county. Reservations must be made early.

Aged Horticulturist Dies at San Mateo

Newton Peck, 77, for many years connected with the San Mateo county horticultural commission, passed away at his home on Minnie street, San Mateo, Monday night. Peck was a prominent figure among the fruit growers and nurserymen of the county. He was at one time county horticultural commissioner of this county and since 1915 has been acting as deputy commissioner under A. W. Tate.

Surviving Peck are his widow, Mrs. Josephine Peck, two step-sons, W. C. Belcher of San Mateo, O. J. Belcher of Friant, and a sister, Mrs. Lucinda Brown of Santa Cruz.

Work Begun Here on New Garage

Work was started this week on a $20,000 garage building being built by Dr. J. L. Ross and to be occupied by Joe Ross and Harry Lewis. The building has a frontage on Winslow street across from the Southern Pacific station and a frontage on Hamilton street. One exit will be provided on the latter street, two on Winslow street and another on Pennsylvania avenue.

The building is of re-enforced concrete and is planned to give the greatest possible protection from fire. Quick-closing fireproof doors divide the interior into two sections. A number of other features are planned to add to the service of the garage, among them a luxuriously furnished rest room for the benefit of patrons who wish to wait for trains or for the theatre.

Joe Ross and Lewis have been running the Foley garage on Broadway for the past year and have built up a fine business here. They expect to be in their new location the first of November.

CITY COUNCILMEN INSPECT HARBOR

Fd Favorable Site For Municipal Dock

Members of the Redwood City council and City Engineer Charles Dimmitt made an inspection on Wednesday of sites available on the bay frontage here for a municipal harbor. Members of the party were City Councilmen D. R. Stafford, Z. T. Thorning, E. M. Dearborn, Mayor Beeger and Dimmitt.

The most favorably considered site inspected was one fronting on a large turning basin being dredged by the Belle Haven Co. on Redwood creek. This site would consist of 25 acres and would afford a frontage of 1000 feet on the turning basin, 4000 feet on the creek and is also bounded on the eastern side by the railroad to the plant of the Pacific Portland Cement Co.

Following the inspection of the harbor site the councilmen met with Philip A. Aubyn, secretary of the Belle Haven Company in regard to the price of the desired land. Aubyn stated that his company would sell the property at a price of $1500 an acre.

Councilman Stafford stated yesterday that this site would not only be advantageous to the city, but that it would be possible to derive a revenue from portions of the property which were not immediately needed by leasing them. An offer had been made, he stated, by a San Francisco boat club to lease a portion of the tract if the city purchased it for the purpose of erecting a boat house.

MAN DIES AS RESULT OF SHOOTING IN JUNE

Shooter Facing Charge of Murder Held in Jail

Frank C. Loper, who was shot in the abdomen following a wedding party last June died Friday at the Base Hospital in Menlo Park, where he has been confined since the shooting. Following Loper's death charges of murder were placed against Jose Romero, accused of the shooting, and he is now being held at the county jail here.

After celebrating the wedding of a friend for two days Loper and his wife, Jose Romera and Frank Reposa, all guests at the wedding celebration left and went to the Loper house, where the feast was continued. Later Romera and Reposa left. Later Romera returned with his partner in a wood cutting busines, Blas Higueras, and stated that Loper had robbed him of $375 which he had had with him. Chief of Police Collins was told that he then began shooting. Loper was shot in the abdomen, Mrs. Loper was struck in the elbow and Romera shot himself in the foot.

Neighbors hearing the melee summoned the police who arrested Romera, Higueras and Romeras brother, Paul Romera. The latter was later released, as having had no part in the shooting. When Romera was searched at the jail the money which he claimed Loper had taken was found in his pocket.

Meeting Important to Campaign Held By Republicans

The county republican committee held an important meeting in the supervisors' chambers in the courthouse last Tuesday evening. Out of the 23 members of the organization 18 answered roll call. Every locality in the county was represented. All sections reported that Hoover would roll up big majorties on November 6. It was predicted that Hoover and Curtis would carry the county by a 5,000 majority.

The committee taked over a plan of campaign. It finally agreed to secure the services of an active man whose duties it would be to distribute literature, to flit from one Hoover Club to another, carrying messages and keeping all informed as to the progress of the campaign. It would also be his duty to urge the registration of all republicans in the county not already registered.

The resolution committee presented suitable resolutions which were unanimously adopted and which will be published in the Times-Gazette next week.

The following committee was appointed to collect special funds D. E. O'Keefe, Mr. Jenkins, Andrew Hynding, George Dunn, Mr. Campbell and John D. Bromfield. The latter was chosen chairman of the committee.

An executive committee was appointed to take full charge of the campaign and to report from time to time to the main body. The representatives from every town in the county will compose the committee.

The body is to make a drive for registration of voters during the next two weeks. Registration closes on October 6.

Dairymen Ask Continuance of Milk Inspection

San Mateo county dairymen appeared before the board of supervisors of this county Monday and asked that the milk inspection maintained by County Inspector J. J. Garland be continued. The work of the inspector was threatened with suspension due to the failure of the supervisors to include the milk inspection department in their annual budget for 1928-1929.

The supervisors were addressed by R. E. Longwell, secretary of the Peninsula Milk Dealers' Association and also by H. B. Paul, former member of the State Department of Agriculture. Both men emphasized the importance of the milk inspector's work in this county.

It was finally agreed to continue the milk inspection under the present arrangement whereby the expenses of the department are defrayed by a fee of onefourtth cent per gallon sold paid by the milk dealers to the county.

Harold Power Leaves Position Here For Philippine Islands

Harold Power, superintendent of the Pacific Portland Cement Company's plant here, resigned that position this week and on Wednesday left for the east preparatory to accepting a position with the Cebu Portland Cement Co. as manager of its plant at Cebu, Philippine Islands.

Power has had charge of the local plant here since its construction in 1924. He began his work in the cement business in 1910 with the Pacific Portland Cement Co. He at that time took charge of the quaries at Auburn maintained by the company to supply rock for the plant which they at that time maintained at Suisun.

At the time of the world war he enlisted with the rank of first lieutenant. He was later promoted to captain and at the time of the signing of the armistice was recommended for promotion to the rank of major. He was cited for bravery by General Pershing.

Following the war Power was made superintendent of the gypsum plant at Mound House, Nevada. After a year at this place he resumed the superintendency of the quarry at Auburn. He was later transferred to the cement plant at Suisun as superintendent.

When the plant here was completed Power was transferred here from Suisun and given charge of the new plant. Since that time he has been engaged in developing the new process employed by the company here.

Power's place as manager of the local plant will be taken by M. J. Johnsson, formerly superintendent of the plant at Suisun, which was discontinued by the company some time ago. Johnsson has been working with Power here since the Suisun plant was closed down.

Before taking charge of the plant in the Philippines Power plans to visit Chicago, New York and other eastern points and study cement manufacture in the east. He will return here and on October 12 will sail on the Robert Dollar for the islands. En route he will visit China and Japan to study methods of cement manufacture employed there.

During his time in Redwood City Power took an active part in club, lodge and political life. He was an active member of the chamber of commerce and of the Redwood City Kiwanis club. At the meeting of the latter organization on Wednesday he was given a hearty farewell. Vice-president Edward Harrison on behalf of the club wished him success in his new position.

Deputy Sheriff and Mrs. Joseph O'Hanlon returned on Monday from a vacation spent in the southern part of the state. They motored as far as Tiajuana in Mexico.

P. G. & E. Team to Show First Aid at San Mateo

An exhibition first aid contest is to be held at San Mateo Junior College gymnasium, Second avenue and highway at 8 p. m., Tuesday evening, September 25th, by employes of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company.

The Pacific Gas and Electric Company is a pioneer in this humanitarian work and every employee of the company receives instruction in first aid so that he can when necessary, render the proper assistance to a sick or injured person.

First aid activites are part of the company's policy and have the entire support of the management. It is carried on extensively throughout the entire organization and each division have their various first aid teams which compete from time to time in elimination contests, this competion is very keen and brings out some very good first aid work.

The value of this first aid instruction has been brought out on numerous occasions when employees of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company have rendered valuable assistance to injured persons.

The company has extended an invitation to the public and particularly the police and fire departments of the peninsula to attend this contest.

Man Jailed For Attempt to Kill Wife in Quarrel

Gus Vlahapaulos is being held in the jail here awaiting the outcome of injuries sustained by his wife in a quarrel which the couple had Saturday night in Burlingame. Mrs. Angeleke Vlahapaulos, the wife, is in a San Mateo hospital suffering from a fractured skull as the result of the fight. The husband is said to have struck her on the head with a heavy glass bowl.

Vlahapaulos made a statement to District Attorney Swart confessing to the attack upon his wife. He is now charged with an attempt to commit murder. This will be changed to murder if Mrs. Vlahapaulos fails to recover.

Mrs. L. Peterson Called by Death

Mrs. Louisa Peterson, wife of Frank A. Peterson, passed away at her home on Cedar street yesterday after an illness of several days. She suffered a paralytic stroke several days ago from which she did not recover.

Mrs. Peterson was a native of Sweden and was 68 years of age. She had been a resident of this country for the past 45 years, 40 of which were spent in Redwood City. Here she raised her family and was loved by all who knew her. Mrs. Peterson was a woman devoted to her family and was loved by all who knew her. Mrs. Peterson was a woman devoted to her family and to her friends. She was fond of the out-of-doors and much of her time was spent at the little cabin which her husband and son built on Pescadero creek.

Surviving Mrs. Peterson are her husband, Frank Peterson, well-known carpenter of this city, a son, Axel, and a daughter, Miss Jennie Peterson.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon from her late residence and will be conducted by Rev. C. H. Stevens, formerly pastor of the Congregational church here. Interment will be in Cypres Lawn.

Atherton Bonds For City Hall Carry

Residents of Atherton last Friday voted favorably on the proposition of issuing bonds for the erection of a $20,000 city hall for their town. The result of the election was 276 votes for the city hall and 56 votes against it.

Plans for the building include offices for the various city departments including a police station and an auditorium for the city council. At present the council holds its meetings in clubhouse of the Menlo Circus club. This has been the meeting place since shortly after the incorporation of the town several years ago. The first meeting place of the council was in the garage of J. B. Coryell.

Members of the local Odd Fellows and Rebekah lodges will visit the orphans' home maintained by them at Gilroy on Sunday, September 30. The visit to the home is an annual practice with these lodges, as is also a visit to the old people's home at Saratoga.

Sequoia Trustees Reject Bids on General Work

The board of trustees of the Sequoia Union High School district met Wednesday evening to consider bids which were received last week for the proposed additions to the school. At the last meeting the lowest two bids for each class of work were retained and taken under advisement by the trustees for further consideration. At the meeting held Wednesday evening both of the retained bids for the general contract were rejected. The bids were from F. L. Hansen for $129,770 and from L. Dioguardi for $131,450.

It is planned to revise the plans and specifications and readvertise for bids on this part of the work. It is the intention of the board to have the new bids ready for opening on October 5.

Bids for the other parts of the work were considered and the lower of the two retained bids retained in each case. These were as follows: plastering, W. A. Gould, $24,500; plumbing, Fred W. Snook & Son, $15,605; painting, D. Burgess, $6,840; electric work, Mark Ryan, $9,940; heating contract, Nottingham Co., $43,444.

Charles Lambert Attends Reception to British Admiral

The reception given to Admiral Sir Cyril Fuller R. N. and the officers and men of the H. M. S. Despatch given in the Scottish Rite auditorium in San Francisco Saturday evening was attended by Charles G. Lambert of this city. Lambert was a member of the Queen's Guards, a crack regiment of the British army, and he and Admiral Fuller found much in common.

On Monday Lambert on behalf of the Peninsula Development Association presented Admiral Fuller with gifts of flowers and fruits from this section. Among them was a huge basket of chrysanthemunis from Redwood City prepared by Boodel & Newsom of this city.

The stay of the British "bluejackets" in San Francisco was made pleasant by a number of affairs planned by the British clubs of the bay region. A dance and entertainment was given them Tuesday evening in San Mateo by the Daughters of St. George, assisted by members of Trafalgar Lodge, Sons of St George. Mrs. T. Lee was chairman of the committee which made the arrangements.

Mrs. Ann Merrill Seeks Divorce Here

Suit was filed this week by Mrs. Ann Merrill, prominent society woman of Atherton, asking divorce from her husband, Ralph D. Merrill, well-known San Francisco businessman and club leader. Charges of extreme cruelty are made in Mrs. Merrill's petition for divorce. She also asks custody of the couple's two minor children. The Merrills were married in Salinas in 1910.

Mrs. Merrill was formerly Miss Ann Mererin of San Francisco. Her husband is the son of the late John F. Merrill. Both people are members of families prominent in society of the peninsula.

REGISTRATION TO CLOSE ON OCTOBER 6TH

The registration of voters for the November election will close on October 6. Those who have registered since January first need not register again except those who have moved from their precinct into another since the primary election on August last. They will have to reregister. Those declining to state party affiliations need not register and those wishing to change their party affiliation need not register, as the November ballot will contain the names of candidates of all the parties and the voter is free to vote for whom he pleases.

It is urged that all voters not registered since last August get their names on the list as soon as possible for two reasons, first, that every citizen should cast his ballot on November for a presidential candidate, and, second, it is the desire of the citizens of San Mateo County to increase the present registration from 27,000 to 30,000. If the latter goal is reached San Mateo County will be the twelfth county in the state in point of population and influence. For these reasons every voter is implored and urged to register and vote.

At the recent election 16,423 votes were cast out of the 27,000, about sixty per cent of the registered vote. Of the 16,423 voters, 12,426 were Republicans. It is the hope of the Republican and Democratic County Committees that a 85 per cent vote be cast at the presidential election.

Treasurer and Fire Chief Address Progress Club

City Treasurer B. E. Myers and Fire Chief Mark E. Ryan addressed members of the Greater Redwood Improvement Association at their meeting held Tuesday evening on Roosevelt avenue and discussed matters of general interest to the club members. Ryan was accompanied by first and second assistant chiefs, Clarence Choate and Al Russell. The meeting was presided over by Eugene Folson, president of the club.

After the meeting Miss Viola Maysenhelder entertained the members with vocal solos which were greatly enjoyed. Refreshments were served and music was enjoyed over a radio supplied by M. Walzberg.

Mother Asks $25,000 For Death of Child

Mrs. Nellie Garland of San Bruno this week filed suit for $25,000 against Mrs. Alice Garrissere of San Francisco for the death of her son, Charles, killed by an automobile last March. In her action, Mrs. Garland charges Mrs. Garrissere with driving in a careless and negligent manner.

The accident occurred as Mrs. Garland, a widow, and her two sons were crossing the highway. Charles was killed and the other son, Richard, was permanently injured.

THE STREET CALLED JANUS

IN ancient Rome the money-changers all had their little offices on the street called Janus. That street was the center of Roman banking—such as it was.

Banking has developed tremendously in the centuries that have passed, until today every one has at his command the service of a strong bank.

Few are, and no one need be, without the safety and assistance afforded by a bank account.

Resourceful Youngster

Mildred Cliff, eleven, lacked the $3 to attend the Nevada junior farm bureau camp at Washoe Valley, Nev. She arranged with Katherine Lewers, University of Nevada, art teacher, to dig angleworms for the latter's prize ducks at 5 cents a dozen. When the camp opened she had the money.

SAME PRESCRIPTION HE WROTE IN 1892

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as today. People lived normal lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe bowel stimulant.

This prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative. It has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds, fevers. At your druggist, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

SMART FALL COAT

The dignity of autumn is depicted in this smart coat worn by the beautiful Kathryn McGuire, screen star. It is military in treatment, with its leather-brown color, its smart cape and its wide cloth belt and buckle. A feature of the wrap is the unusual sleeve, cuffless, but having straps in lieu of them. Felt hats have departed from the brimless idea, as Miss McGuire's chapeau will indicate.

MYSTERY OF PACIFIC

New York.—For nearly eighty years sea captains have talked of the existence of a "lost" island somewhere in the south Pacific, a lonely paradise of green palms, gleaming beaches of powdered coral and blue lagoons, all guarded by a ring of saw-toothed reefs over which the tortured sea boils in sheets of foam.

Passing ships have reported it lying low in the turquoise sea like an emerald, but when the hydrographers have tried to locate and chart it they have found nothing but the empty ocean.

Some persons have regarded it as a myth, others as one of the strange phantoms of the sea, while the more practical ones have declared it to have been one of the floating islands not uncommon in tropical waters. A few believe it to be so low lying in the sea that it is easy to miss.

It was first reported in 1859, and one year later the United States corvette Levant dropped out of sight forever on her way from Hilo to Panama. There was some reason to suppose that she went to look for the island, for, while the corvette was in port at Honolulu in June, 1860, Lieutenant Stout, her executive officer, expressed great interest in the island and talked with several merchant captains about its probable location.

The Levant was heading southeast when she left Hilo and sailing a course which, if continued, would take her across the equator and into the latitude of the mysterious island.

It was partly around the Levant that Edward Everett Hale wove his imaginary tale of "The Man Without a Country," in which he prophetically wrote of the foundering of the warship, but fixed the date nearly three years later than her actual disappearance, naming the time of Nolan s death on the Levant, after fifty years of voyaging and transfers from ship to ship, as May 11, 1863, in latitude 2 degrees 11 minutes south and longitude 131 west, somewhere near 1,500 to 2,000 miles southeast of Honolulu.

On that date the Levant had in all probability been lying at the bottom of the sea for nearly three years, as she left Hilo in August, 1860, and vanished.

No vessel ever spoke to her at sea after she disappeared into the regions of the trade winds. While at Honolulu, Lieutenant Stout, with much pride, showed to his ship's visitors the stateroom Phillip Nolan was supposed to have occupied.

TO BE AUTUMN BRIDE

Miss Laura Volstead, daughter of the former representative from Minnesota, Andrew J. Volstead, has announced her engagement to Carl Lomen of Alaska. The marriage will take place in October and they will make their home in New York city. Miss Volstead is a law graduate from George Washington university law school. The portrait shows her in her Red Cross uniform.

Turpentine Soaked Girl Burns Self to Death

New York.—Apparently disappointed in love, Miss Louisa Amelia de Hostos, thirty-eight years old, set herself afire in her upper west side apartment and died at Harlem hospital. Miss de Hostos, said by a friend to be the daughter of Eugenia de Hostos, a Porto Rican educator for whom a monument has been erected in San Juan, came to New York to seek a career as an author. At the hospital it was said she had saturated her clothing with turpentine and, after climbing into the bathtub, had applied a match. She left no message accounting for the deed.

French Makers of Fashion Wake Up

Paris.—There must be a new method established in the creation of French styles for the United States and South America.

That is the opinion of M. Rene Herbst, president of the Society of Modern Decorators, who is spreading propaganda for the creation of special establishments throughout the world for the presentation of French models.

He is not alone in his belief, and the French style-fixers are ready to contribute a fund of several million francs to protect their interests abroad. They have been considerably alarmed, they admit, during the last few years by the tendency of American dressmakers, milliners, and interior decorators to take the French motifs and adapt them to the particular needs of their own country.

During the winter, several groups of French business men are to visit the principal cities of both the Americas. They are to study American methods and American needs. Whether they will be able to meet both without ruining their own artistic pride, according to one prominent French writer, is the question that is worrying them most.

"But we are losing several million francs of commerce every year simply because we do not give exactly what the clients want," is the argument behind the new movement. "We are too proud of our own ideas, and unless we grant some leeway to the creative genius of other nations, France's luxury trade is certain to suffer seriously during the next few years."

New War Vessel Like Fine Hotel

London.—H. M. S. Nelson, the newest addition to the British navy, is equipped with a soda fountain. Aside from the armament, she has many other points of interest which would surprise the tars who sailed the seven seas 100 years ago.

In her domestic arrangements the Nelson sets a new standard. When going to sea she takes along 1,000 gallons of rum, 156,000 pounds of flour, 42,000 pounds of sugar, 7,000 pounds of tea, 43,000 tins of condensed milk, 20,000 pounds of frozen meat, 40,000 pounds of vegetables, 5,000 pounds of tobacco and 10,000 pounds of soap. In addition she carries large quantities of fresh meat and other consumable stores.

The catering department of the Nelson is equal in its equipment and organization to that of a first-class hotel. The men's meals are prepared by a staff of expert cooks in kitchens that have all sorts of modern electrical appliances. In the bakery all the work is done by machinery and the food is not handled.

The mess decks where the crew live are lighted by scuttles instead of artificial light, which is used in most warships. Every section of the crew has its own bathrooms.

There are comfortable recreation rooms supplied with papers and magazines for the use of the men who are off duty and there is a well-stocked general shop at which the men buy whatever they need. Moving picture entertainments are provided for them and there is a fairly large chapel.

Volunteers Replace Professional Models

Paris.—Professional artist models are dying out as a class in this citadel of art. Never before have there been so many artists in Paris, so many schools and so many galleries; but models, particularly women, are a vanishing race.

With a few rare exceptions, the professionals have been replaced by an anonymous crowd of out-of-work manikins from dressmaking establishments, chorus girls and, above all, by disinterested persons devoted to the cause of art.

Art is so much the fashion that painters and sculptors often find their choice of models limited only by the list of their acquaintances. Many American girls, well educated, of good families, consider it an honor to pose in the studios of Montparnasse and Montmartre.

A Chinese typewriter requires about 4,000 characters.

CONCERNING INVITATIONS

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

NANCY and I get a great many invitations to one sort of function or another. We have lived in the same place most of our lives, and so we know everybody and everybody knows us. We like going, as all gregarious animals do, and we are pleased to be remembered when our friends, young or old, are entertaining. These invitations come to us in a variety of ways—through chance meetings on the street, when some one says, "Oh! we're going to have a few friends in on Wednesday night at eight, won't you drop in?"—over the telephone and in formal and informal notes which the postman delivers at our door. There is a vagueness about some of these invitations and an inaccuracy which is often confusing if not disconcerting.

"Are we going to the sophomore dance on Friday night?" I inquire at lunch time on Monday. "I'll have to have my clothes pressed if we go."

"Well, is it formal or informal?" Nancy inquires, not answering my question, or answering it by asking another.

"I don't know," I reply. "It has always been an extremely informal affair in past years, but I heard some sort of rumor that this year there was going to be an attempt to force everyone into Tuxedos. What does the invitation say?"

We found the badly printed sheet after a thorough search. It was a mixture of formal and informal form which gave no dependable evidence as to what one was expected to wear; there was a request to R. S. V. P., but no suggestion as to whom or where to address the response. We looked up the class officers finally and got the information we were looking for; and I sent the right suit to be put into presentable condition.

Customs differ in different communities, and these customs so far as possible one should familiarize himself with, but the invitation to any social function should indicate the time and the place and the character of the gathering. Most invitations require an answer and the invitation should give definite indication to whom and to what address the reply is to be sent. A formal invitation should never be issued to an informal affair, nor vice versa. Written invitations should be done with care and in good form. The last one I received had neither my proper street address nor was my name spelled properly. Now there are few things which annoy one in a more irritating way than to find his name misspelled by some one who has known him for twenty years. In the case I mentioned I am sure it was one of the children who wrote the invitation and his work had not been properly vised.

Brady had a few men in the other night to meet a friend of his. The gathering was informal in the extreme, but Crane was there in a dinner coat—though there was no dinner—and a stiff shirt and went about looking like a butler and feeling quite dressed up and out of place. He had evidently received the wrong sort of invitation or had misread what he had gotten.

Food for Unborn Chicks

Very little of the yellow and none of the white of an egg are part of the chicken which develops within the shell. Instead, these substances serve as food during the chick's development. This is accomplished through little blood vessels which reach out through this food from the embryo chick. A portion of the white is eaten just before hatching.

Squash Played 2,000 Years Ago in Yucatan

New Orleans.—Evidence that a game similar to squash was played by natives of Yucatan 2,000 years ago was found by a Tulane university expedition, which returned from an exploring trip through Central America and Mexico.

Dr. Frans Blom of the department of middle-American research of Tulane, who headed the expedition, said he found courts upon which the game had been played by the ancient Mayan tribes. The courts still were in excellent repair, he said, and there could be no mistake about what they were used for.

The game apparently had been played with rubber balls which had been knocked back and forth across the court with something similar to rackets. Heretofore, Doctor Blom explained, it had been thought such games had not been played in that section earlier than 1,000 or 1,200 years ago.

The Campaign for Votes Is Open

Hoover, A Sure Winner

GO tell the truth, right after the two conventions we were a little worried. In June Al Smith seemed a formidable contender. Not since Bryan's first appearance with his silver tongue and silver money did the Democratic party seem to have as good a chance to beat the Republicans. Prohibition and farm-relief appeared to have split the Republican ranks whereas the Democrats presented an apparently solid front.

But we are worrying no longer. Experience has shown that the Republicans spilt was merely a surface crack less than an inch deep whereas the Democratic front, especially its Southern exposure, seems to be crumbling. And the farm-relief yowl is showing up in its true colors as a preconvention campaign move in favor of Lowden and Dawes.

Now, loved ones, don't misunderstand. We still maintain that there is precious little difference between the party organizations styling themselves Republican here and Democratic there; we are still convinced that both platforms are built out of identical meaningless and insincere piffle. On these subjects our opinion has not changed. But we do believe most wholeheartedly that of the two leading candidates Herbert Hoover is by far the better fitted to be President of the United States. And because of this belief we are glad to announce that every week since the nomination, Hoover has been gaining and Smith has been losing strength. We are so certain of Hoover's election that we are willing to stake our one spare tire against a cigar-store coupon entitling the winner to a new Ford on his victory—October Sunset.

The Anti - Rodeo Bill

THERE has been considerable smoke screen of late from those whose business interests are more or less closely connected with the sport called the rodeo. We have heard much of late about "protecting the sport of the West" and similar catchy if somewhat misleading phrases. To all of which we would entone a gentle "Blah."

The rodeo is not distinctive of the west. It is not a continuation of the old round-ups of the early cattle days. The round-up was a necessity brought about by the nature of the country and its industries in early times. The rodeo is not such a necessity—it accomplishes nothing of value either to the country or to those who view it. It is merely an example of commercialized cruelty.

The voters at the next election will have an opportunity to vote upon an amendment whicl rob the rodeo of certain cruel features. This amendment is not aimed at the prevention of rodeos, horse shows or any other good sport; but it is aimed at ending certain cruel practices made use of at rodeos to make the sport appear lively to the spectators. A few such practices are the biting of a horse's ear by the rider to make hum buck; placing a piece of barbed wire under the cinch to make a horse appear spirited; or the riding of young calves

To be sure, the frantic antics of the tortured animals add to the box office receipts and the amendment is meeting with strong opposition from quarters directly affected. However, if those who desire to see unnecessary and commercialized cruelty abolished will vote for amendment No. 21 at the November election, a big impetus will be given toward the abolishment of this relic of barbarism.

Politics Show Intense Interest

By CLEM WHITAKER

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 20 (CNB)—The days of the old torch light processions, crusades of "the full dinner pail" and silver-tongued oratory about "free silver" may be gone forever, but California's 1928 battle front in the presidential campaign gives every evidence that politics is back in the saddle again in full vigor.

Californians are actually taking their politics seriously this year, despite all you've heard about the breakdown of representative government, and no one knows it better than the election statisticians.

Greater partisanship, intense feeling on both sides of the political slate and quickened interest among the usually lethargic voters—these are some of the things that state scouts report. And the controversy rages equally fiercely in the great urban hotel lobbies and the lobbies and the corner grocery store.

Indicative of the tremendous interest in things political awakened by the Herbert Hoover-Al Smith attraction, Charles Hagerty, state election statistician, predicted today that the registration for the final election in California will exceed the primary total by approximately 250,000. Never before in the history of the state, he points out, has there been such a large increase in registration between the two elections.

By the time the November battle rolls around, some 2,250,000 voters will be qualified to take the field in California, according to Hagerty's tabulations, and the total may even run over that estimate.

Adding to the zest of the campaign is the unusual circumstance of each of the party standard bearers attempting to break into the winning column in the state of his opponent. With Governor Al Smth of New York planning to invade California, the Hoover forces are returning the compliment by exerting strenuous efforts to carry New York State. As the radio announcer would say, "Oh, what a ball game!"

Though California is normally a safe Republican state, the G. O. P. forces are rallying for an intensive campaign under the slogan, "Remember the Wilson campaign." Their leaders express confidence of rolling up a big majority for Hoover in his home state but they're taking nothing for granted, and the Bourbon cohorts are in much the same state of mind regarding New York, their candidate's home bailiwick.

The element that gives the political experts of both camps occasional fluttering of the heart is the uncertainty that exists with regard to the ordinarily non-voting voter, who is turning out this year to take part in the fray. There are some 200,000 votes in this classifcation, judging from the early registration returns, and the experts have no way of gauging where they will go.

But regardless of the political complexion of the huge new voting army, which would make a sizeable majority for any candidate, the state's students of political economy see the unusual turnout as a good omen for democratic government. There is little satisfaction in this year's presidential affray for the pessimists who are usually to the front with the lamentation that rule by popular vote is gone forever.

PRIVATE INTERESTS PROPOSE BUILDING KENNETT PROJECT

By LAWRENCE MONFORT
(Staff Correspondent)

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 12—Proposal made to the State Legislative Water Investigation committee that private interests construct the $80,000,000 Kennett dam project and operate it under rates fixed by the State Railroad Commission with ownership reverting to the state at the end of a 40-year period is being considered by the committee today and will be included in its report to the Legislature next January.

With this offer from the largest private interests in the state interested in manufacture and distribution of electric energy in reserve, the committee, however, still is considering several other means of financing the tremendous co-ordinated water plan which, if carried out in full, will simultaneously effect Sacramento River flood control and abatement of salt water injury to industry in the Contra Costa industrial section; aid of navigation, generation of electric power equal to the present combined output of Northern California, and replenishing of the rapidly diminishing water supply of the Southern San Joaquin Valley.

The committee, headed by Assemblyman Bradford S. Crittenden of San Joanquin County today acted to hasten preparation of its formal report by preparing for an early hearing when State Engineer Edward Hyatt will report on feasibility of alternative engineering plans, and the feasibility of four proposals for financing the great project will be discussed. These latter include:

1.—Construction by private interests, power and irrigation water to be sold under State Railroad Commission rates, the property to revert to the state at the end of a 40-year period.

2.—State construction of Kennett or Iron Canyon Dam and necessary dams and pumping system in the San Joaquin for water distribution, the state to retail water and power to cities and irrigation districts.

4.—Financing by means of distributing the cost to a large extent over irrigation districts to be served.

Possibility that the Southern Pacific Company might use the entire output of electrical energy generated at Kennett or Iron Canyon is being discussed by committee members, especially as it is known that the company is seeking a stable supply of current for electrifying its system over the Cascades from Roseville to Reno.

The committee has maintained an open mind, is interested in all proposals and probably will be content to submit all possible methods of placing the coordinated water plan in operation to the legislature with all available data without definite recommendation, according to Assemblyman Bert Adams of Livingston, committee member.

"The committee still is very hopeful that it can find a plan whereby this needed water system, entailing as it does, an expenditure well over $100,000,000, can be financed without recourse to a bond issue," declared Adams. "The Southern San Joaquin Valley farmers are keenly alive to the seriousness of the situation resulting from the constantly lowering water table there, and, I believe, are ready to contribute their share toward this financing. Contra Costa industrial interests, in real need of an adequate fresh water supply have expressed willingness to do their share, and navigation, the Sacramento Valley which would be greatly benefitted through flood control, and the state and federal governments, and possibly private interests would cooperate under this plan."

The committee, which has been working on the coordinated project and other phases of water investigation since its appointment by the 1927 legislature, is expected to give considerable study to the Folsom dam site on the American river, negotiations for lease of which by the state to the American River Hydro-electric Company recently failed.

Life of Christ To Be Shown on Sequoia Screen

In response to many requests from the patrons of the Sequoia Theatre Cecil B. De Mille's production, "The King of Kings,' has been booked for a two days' showing beginning on Monday next. This is the picture that was presented to crowded audiences for six months at the Gaiety Theatre, New York. It enjoyed exceedingly successful runs in Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, and many other cities in this country and abroad.

Praised by Reviewers

In filming this wonderful story of Christ, Mr. De Mille displayed daring, the work being even more venturesome than his "The Ten Commandments" and the pitfalls many. The unanimous praise of the reviewers in all the metropolitan centers indicates that his effort proved successful. He employed all his own personal resources and exhausted the new and old technic of the screen. He was aided in the work by representatives of many faiths and research scholars of authority. Miss Jeanie Macpherson, the scenarist, is said to have wrought a more finely constructed story than that of "The Ten Commandments."

Favorites in Cast

Among the eighteen stars of the production are such favorites as H. B. Warner, Jacqueline Logan, Rudolph and Joseph Schildkraut, Victor Varconi, William Boyd, Montagu Love, George Siegmann, Theodore Kosloff, Julia Faye, Robert Edeson, Sam De Grasse. In fact, the cast of principals is a roster of eminent names in pictures. Approximately $2,500,000 is said to have been expended on the production. As the actors embody the cherished characters of the New Testament narrative, so the hundred great sets faithfully realize the scenes in the life of Jesus.

The picture was shown with extraordinary success in this country and abroad and it won the commendation of press and public alike. Its beauty and charm evoked the general praise.

EXCHANGE CLUB HAS INTERESTING TALK ON SNAKES

Members of the Redwood City Exchange Club saw snakes after their dinner Tuesday evening. It was alright though, the snakes were real and the members had only been served coffee and milk with their meal. The snakes were specimens brought by Leonard Keeler, student of the Stanford Medical School, who is working his way through college by raising rattle snakes.

Keeler gave a most interesting talk on snakes, especially rattlesnakes. Keeler raises the snakes for the poison which is extracted from their fangs. From this poison an anti-toxin for use in case of snake bite is prepared.

Keeler also gave an interesting account of the snake dance practiced by the Hopi Indians of Arizona, in which the Indians carry snakes about with them in the evolutions of their dance and yet are not injured. Keeler explained that for seven days before the dance is scheduled, the snakes are confined in underground pits. Here, according to the ritual, the snakes are tormented with sticks to which tufts of feathers are attached. This results in the snake exuding all of its venom before the dance actually takes place. As a result the snakes are quite harmless to the dancers.

Philip Morse, another Stanford student, accompanied Keeler and aided in the exhibition of the snakes which included two rattlers a gopher snake and a king snake Keeler showed the method of extracting the venom from the rattle snakes for use in the laboratories.

Carroll D. Hall, editor of the Tribune, was chairman of the meeting.

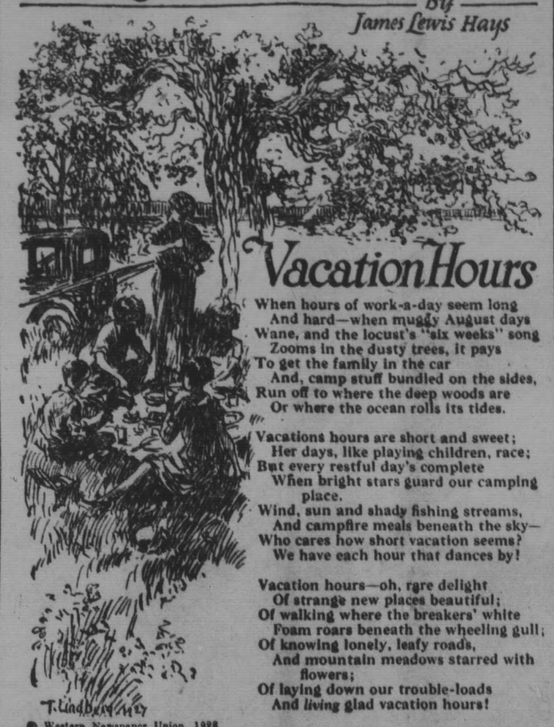
Songs of Plain Folks

By James Lewis Hays



Vacation Hours

When hours of work-a-day seem long
And hard—when muggy August days
Wane, and the locust's "six weeks" song
Zooms in the dusty trees, it pays
To get the family in the car
And, camp stuff bundled on the sides,
Run off to where the deep woods are
Or where the ocean rolls its tides.

Vacations hours are short and sweet;
Her days, like playing children, race;
But every restful day's complete
When bright stars guard our camping place.
Wind, sun and shady fishing streams,
And campfire meals beneath the sky—
Who cares how short vacation seems?
We have each hour that dances by!

Vacation hours—oh, rare delight
Of strange new places beautiful;
Of walking where the breakers' white
Foam roars beneath the wheeling gull;
Of knowing lonely, leafy roads,
And mountain meadows starred with flowers;
Of laying down our trouble-loads
And living glad vacation hours!

Burlingame Burglars Nabbed in Mission

San Francisco police on Sunday morning arrested Fred Sills and Bert Stewart wanted in the county for the burglary of the Pattisson garage on Second avenue in San Mateo the night before. The men were brought to the jail here and later were given a hearing before Judge Kertell.

The two men wrote signed confessions for Chief of Police Burke of San Mateo telling of the burglary of the garage. The confessions told of how they had parked their car a distance from the garage which they had planned to rob. They then broke into the garage, loaded eleven new tires into a car which they found there, took a small sum of money from the till. Driving out with the stolen car to where they had parked their own machine the two men transferred the loot to their machine and drove into San Francisco.

The robbery was discovered by San Mateo police, who on a chance that the thieves would go to San Francisco notified the police of that city. They were picked up shortly afterward.

At the hearing before Judge Kertell the bail was set at $1000 cash or $2000 bonds. Neither men has been able to raise bail and both are now held at the jail here. Stewart told police officers that he served two years in prison for theft in Los Angeles.

Civilization's Debt To Money Is Told

Development Through Agest Traced in Local Bank's New Series

How important a part the development of money has played in the advancement of civilization from the earliest days to the present, is brought out in interesting fashion in a new series of unusual illustrated folders just prepared for distribution in this community by the First National Bank.

Speaking of the series yesterday, Mr. E. T. Harrison, of the bank, declared that the main purpose of the material, which will be distributed free, is to bring about a more general appreciation of the evolution of money as a medium of exchange, the principles that govern its use, and the part it has played in determining the character of the modern business and industrial world. That this important message can best be carried by handsomely printed folders, illustrated in colors and with attractive pen-and-ink sketches by skilled artists, is the thought of the bank's officers, since there will be an incentive to save the series not only because of the pictures, but because of the entertaining manner in which the text is written. Every fact is well authenticated.

It will be impossible to read the folders without obtaining a clearer idea about the origin and development of money, its real nature, what it does, and what happens when the fundamental laws concerning its manufacture and use are disregarded.

Money has always been something of a mystery, even to those who are most successful in accumulating it. The people of most nations in the past have relied blindly upon their rulers or others in authority to produce it honestly, to protect it from inflation and to redeem it promptly. Economists are authority for the statement that most of the economic disasters that have come to nations in the past have been due to mistaken judgments and unwise actions in the administration of the financial policies of those nations.

To practically every American the subject of the development of money is vitally interesting, for we all are concerned with it because of its effect upon our happiness and prosperity.

Our country has been a laboratory for experiment. Our forefathers made mistakes, but through profiting by them we have developed a sound currency and an equally strong, effective and adaptable banking system. Here is a subject that touches every one. It is full of human interest, of amusing episodes and of dramatic incidents. It is just as important that we should know our country's financial history as that we be familiar with its political history. One concerns us as much as does the other. One is as interesting as the other. Furthermore, neither can be understood completely without a knowledge of the other.

A review of the folders in the new series indicates that they will be retained for reference by a great many people. Written clearly and entertainingly, they at the same time emphasize facts that will be new to even the best informed.

Odd Fellows Plan Opening Celebration

The opening of their remodeled lodge building will be the occasion for a big celebration to be given by the boosters' committee of Bay View Lodge of Odd Fellows on Saturday evening.

The arrangements for the affair were being completed this week by a committee headed by O. E. Blackington of Woodside. Among the proposed events will be a dance for which music will be supplied by Towne's orchestra. Refreshments will be served. All Odd Fellows, Rebekahs and their friends are invited.

The Odd Fellows' building on Main street has just been completely remodeled, being changed into almost a duplicate of the Masonic Temple, which it adjoins. The front is identical with the Masonic building so that the two appear as one large building. The work of remodeling the building was done by Russell & Duncan and the painting was done by Mahl & Townsend.

The first meeting in the lew lodge hall was held on Wednesday when officers and members of Bay View Lodge conferred the first degree of their order upon a class of candidates from Oceanside Lodge of Half Moon Bay. The degree was witnessed by a large number of visitors from Half Moon Bay and other lodges of the district.

Pauline Frederick to Tour East in Her Car

Pauline Frederick, stage and screen star, plans to do all her traveling this season in a new Graham-Paige eight-cylinder LeBaron phaeton. Miss Frederick launched her new play, "The Scarlet Woman", in Detroit late in the spring, and during its ten weeks' successful run, she became extremely motor-wise. Before leaving the automobile capital, she ordered a Graham-Paige phaeton delivered at her home in Beverly Hills, California.

The custom-built LeBaron body is finished in aluminum lacquer and black.

Miss Frederick will drive her Graham-Paige back to Detroit this month for rehearsals of ::The Scarlet Woman", in which she will shortly appear in the eastern cities.

County Democrats To Hold Meeting

Local supporters of the candidacy of Governor Alfred Smith for President will meet in the Chambers of the Board of Supervisors in the Court House at Redwood City, on Friday evening, September 21, 1928, at 8o'clock, for the purpose of organizing a Redwood City Smith-Robinson Club.

Anyone interested in the candidacy of the Democratic nominees is urged to be present.

Pinning a Medal on Him

Kirby in New York World, Feb. 20, 1920

THOSE qualifications and achievements which make Herbert C. Hoover so eminently desirable as the next President of the U. S. have never been better described than by Charles E. Hughes at the Carnegie Hall meeting at which the Civic Forum's medal for distinguished public service was conferred upon Mr. Hoover.

"The Americanism of Hoover is shown in every deed, in every utterance. His achievements dignified the Nation, and established prestige for the American name abroad which even the mistakes of diplomacy cannot obscure. He bears a name illustrious because of remarkable achievements; but, best of all, it is a name untarnished, expressive not only of exceptional ability but of the simple life of a modest citizen."

This is the opinion of a man who has been a distinguished Governor of New York, a distinguished Asociate Justice of the United States Supreme Court, and the Republican candidate for President of the United States. It is likewise the opinion of an increasingly great number of American citizens of all parties, men and women alike.

Where is theer another candidate, Democratic or Republican, to match him?

Areo Exposition to Open Here Next Tuesday

Redwood City now is seeing a last minute dash of preparation for the Pacific Aero Exposition, which will open next Tuesday on her flying field.

Two meetings of the board of governors of the Pacific Aero Club, which is sponsoring the big show, were held in San Francisco Monday and Wednesday nights to take final action on plans.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Florence Sutton Sanders, manager of the Redwood City Airport, and W. F. Hamilton, director general of the Exposition, were busiest of all directing preparations at the Exposition scene.

The airport has been cleared, and carpenters have been set at work on the exhibition pavilion, where one of the most complete displays of aerial industries ever gathered in California will be shown. Robert Fowler of San Jose, general chairman of the Club's Exposition Committee, plans to bring many of the exhibits from the Los Angeles show to Redwood City.

Hamilton is bustling through the last details of the staging of the pageant, coronation of the Air Queen, parade and grand ball which, held on Saturday night, will bring the entire show to a brilliant climax.

The parade, which will depict the evolution of transportation from the primitive Indian drags to the most modern air liner, will end and the pageant, coronation and ball will be held in the street before the City Hall. The thoroughfare will be roped off for the occasion.

Miss Dora Bertolucci of this city was leading the dozen girls who are contesting for the Queen's throne when the last count was made

Final count in the queen contest will be taken the afternoon of coronation day.

Communications received by Captain Roy N. Francis, president of the Aero Club, the past week guaranteed that flyers from both the army and navy will be on hand during the exposition to show the latest in fighting ships, both at rest on land and in action in the air.

In expectation of vast crowds at the show, parking space for 5,000 automobiles is being arranged in fields adjoining the show grounds.

The exposition itself will be free to the public. A small charge will be made for automobile parking.

LEGIONNAIRS PLAN PEACE CELEBRATION

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 20 (CNB) —In memory of "ten years after" all buddies and their friends are being invited to a gigantic Armistice Celebration in Sacramento on November 12, Assemblyman Roy Nielsen, chairman of the Sacramento Post No. 61 of the American Legion sponsoring the festivities, announced today.

A special invitation is beng sent to all the posts of the Sacramento Valley and Delta Region to come in full force and enter their best "army mule," "navy goat" or other memento of the "canned willy" days in the "Big Parade" taking off at 10 a. m. A war on the new stadium grid between the College of the Pacific eleven and the California Aggies and a sham battle with about 1000 troops participating will enliven the afternoon, while an Armistice Day Ball in evening will top off a "perfect day."

Colonel W. A. Mason and General R. E. Mittelstaedt will have charge of the day's warfare, while a committee of 11 composed of all the past commanders of the Sacramento Post will rule the other events.

The government's lease on the present postoffice building on Broadway will expire in about two years. The government is already in the field for a location. Next spring bids will be asked for a site. It is believed that the postoffice authorities have their eye on the Hare, Brewer, Clarke block. It was rumored yesterday that a building may be erected for the government by this concern on Webster street to the rear of the present structure. The postoffice department admires the parking space that that location would afford.

Man Injured When Hit by Automobile

When Mrs. Marion Morgan of 1062 Highway started her car Saturday when it was parked against the curb in front of Charles Zinola's barber shop on Broadway, she did not notice that it was in gear. When the engine started the car climbed the curb and crossed the sidewalk to halt against the wall of the building.

Geacento Corti of South San Francisco, who was in the path of the car suffered slight injuries when he was pinned between the bumper of the car and the building. Corti was saved from severe injuries by the fact that the car struck the building at an angle.

STROPPING IS ESSENTIAL TO THE PERFECT SHAVE

are all Barbers CRAZY?

Is stropping a playful gesture to amuse you?

Or has the new Valet AutoStrop Razor proved that there is a fundamental reason for stropping?

YES, all barbers are insane . . . so are other millions of men . . . if stropping a blade to sharpen it is useless.

But you know that every barber throughout the entire world knows that he must strop before he shaves. An unstropped edge is like a row of needles. It pulls and tears the skin.

There is one razor and only one which automatically insures a stropped blade for every shave—The Valet AutoStrop Razor.

The Million Dollar Model is the result of 21 years of research and the expenditure of a million dollars in experiments. Everywhere men are adopting it because of its new-day improvements.

Perfectly balanced and self-adjusting, its friendly angle fits the face and cuts through the stiffest beard with smooth precision. With the Valetite-processed blade it is a marvel of shaving ease.

Blades are inserted or removed simply by pressing a button. Blades are locked in firm, non-flexible grip that eliminates vibration and pull. New type guard lets you use the full shaving edge. And—fundamentally important—the exclusive self-stropping feature keeps the blade edge super-sharp. No need to remove blade to strop or clean it.

Weigh these facts. You know barbers haven't been wrong for 2,000 years in stropping. Why experiment with your face?

Give a Valet AutoStrop Razor a fair trial. You'll quickly learn to like it—then you'll never go back to an unstropped blade.

Beautifully finished models complete with blades and an improved strop in handsome cases at $1.00 to $25.00.

Sequoia High School To Get $4,000 of State Budget

By ESTO BROUGHTON

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 20 (CNB)—If there is anything in the slogan, "The Safety of a democracy lies in an enlightened electorate," then California is rushing millions to the defense of her future commonwealth in the appropriation this week of over $16,000,000 for educatonal aid, as announced today by William John Cooper, state superintendent of public instruction.

Of this sum, only the first apportionment is for the 1928-29 school year the next being due in February, the County of San Mateo profits in the round sum of $229,560 of which $206,500 is designated for use of the elementary schools only and the remainder or $23,060 for the high school. Of this latter amount Sequoia Union High School will receive $4,000.

Playing hookey will be an expensive game in San Mateo county, according to Cooper, since the rest of the state school fund will be distributed in February on the basis of $5.91 per unit of average daily attendance in the grammar school, while it will be even more costly in the high school where the fund is apportioned on a ratio of $24.25 per unit of average daily attendance.

The state's financial melon cut and divded among the 58 counties today amounts to a grand total of $16,841,233.48. The bulk of this state subsidy goes to the elementary schools or an amount totaling $15,249,252.02, while $1,152,881.46 will accure to the high high schools and only 439,000 to the 13 junior college districts.

Los Angeles County's school appropriation based on its attendance record amounts to over one-third of the total state school fund now being apportioned, the southern county receiving $5,113,921.51 from the state for an estimated 7,233 teacher units rated at $700 each and including $50,793 for special educaion for crippled children.

Alameda county outstripped San Francisco in school attendance being enttled to $1,175,281 from the elementary school fund for this school term, while San Francisco obtains but $1,065,846.60. Little Aline county receives least of all the counties being entitleed to only $1400 for two teacher units, according to the school department.

The little Gypsy children follow their parents through the migratory work of California's crop cycle are not overlooked entirely in the state school report, a fund of $2,800 for the support of four teachers is set aside to assist rural school districts whch must expand temporarily to care for them.

PLAN CLEBRATION OF 75TH ANNIVERSARY OF STATE FAIR

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 20 (CNB)—San Mateo County next year along with her 57 sisters will be asked to make a special effort to celebrate the 75th anniversary of the California State Fair.

The Diamond Jubilee fair of 1929 already was being planned and had assurance of cooperation from more than 40 of the counties before the gates closed on the 1928 exhibition just ended, and according to President R. A. Condee of the State Agricultural Society, promises to be the most colorful show staged in California since the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

Meetings will be held in Los Angeles, Sacramento and San Francisco early next month when members of the State Fair Exhibitors Association will unite on a general theme in all county displays, featuring the Diamond Jubilee idea.

Tentative proposals call for making the big horticultural pavilion at the state fair grounds a huge anniversary exhibit with one general decorative sceme built around the Diamond Jubilee idea, but with each county workng out its individual exhibit in harmony.

Already, according to Condee, California is assured of the cooperation of 10 other western states which will send agricultural, horticultural and livestock exhibits to compete with the cream of California's output.

With the Fair attendance this year well over the 300,000 mark, Condee predicts that next year's Diamond Jubilee Exposition will draw more than 500,000 persons.

PASTURAGE HERE IS 82 PER CENT OF NORMAL AMOUNT

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 20 (CNB)—Fire which yearly rages through California hills has taken an appalling toll of pasture this year, which in conjuncton with lack of rain has sent a great deal of stock to stubble fields for food, E. E. Kaufmann, federal-state statistician, announced today as a result of his September survey of livestock and pasturage conditions.

With statewide conditions averaging 79 per cent of normal as compared with 80 last month and 88 a year ago, San Mateo county pasturage conditions are about 82 per cent of normal, as compared with the same percentage for a nine-year average. Cattle generally are in good shape and the hay crop up to its usual high standard in that county, Kaufman reported.

In a few sections are drought conditons acute, Kaufman said.

Cattle generally throughout the state are in good general condition, and all classes are in very good demand at relatively high prices, while the same applies to sheep and lambs.

California this year will produce less hay than last. Condition of tame hay now is 87 percent of normal, and production is forecast at 4,649,000 tons as compared with 5,156,000 tons last year. Wild hay production, estimated at 176,000 tons, will exceed by 30,000 tons the 1927 production.

SYNOPSIS

Events of the story as set forth in the journal of William A. Porter, professor of English literature:

The professor's uncle, Horace Porter, died mysteriously at his home, Twin Hollows, now the professor's property. Jane, the professor's wife, is a psychic. She insists Uncle Horace, dead for a year, had attended his class reunion and produces a snapshot to prove her contention. Professor Cameron, interested in psychical research, inclines to the idea of psychic photography.

A mild term, that, for Jane's feeling about the house. Actually, she hates it. Has always hated it. She has had no pride in our acquisition of it; she has even steadfastly refused to bring away from it any of that early American furniture with which old Horace had filled it.

Yet she collects early American furniture. I write tonight at an utterly inadequate early American desk, because of this taste of hers. And yet she will have none of Uncle Horace's really fine collection.

Nor is she of the type to listen to Annie Cochran's story that the old portion of the house is haunted by the man killed there.

(Note: An old story and not authenticated, of the shooting of a man many years ago as he hid to escape the excise. As a matter of fact, none of our later experiences in the house bore out this particular tradition at all.)

If she has a distaste for it, it may possibly relate to the occupancy of the house by the Riggs woman before Uncle Horace bought it. But even here I am doubtful, for Mrs. Riggs was caught in most unblushing fraud and entirely discredited as a medium.

June 21.

Edith is back. She came in this morning, kissed Jock, Jane and myself, Jock first, demanded an enormous breakfast and all the hot water in the house, and descended gaily a half hour later to the table.

"Well," she said, attacking her melon, "and when do we go to the haunted house?"

"Ask your aunt."

She glanced at me and then shrewdly at Jane.

"Good heavens!" she said. "Don't tell me there's any question about it?"

"It isn't decided yet," Jane said uneasily. "It's a big house, Edith and—"

"All the more reason for taking it," said Edith, and having finished her melon flung out her pretty arms. "Grass," she said, "and flowers, and the sea. I shall swim," she went on. "And old Father William shall fish, and Jane shall sew a fine seam. And at night the ghosts shall walk. And everything will be lovely."

She turned to me.

"You do believe in ghosts, don't you, Father William?"

And somehow even Jane caught some of the infection of her gayety. "Ask him about the triangle in a circle," she said.

"What's that?" Edith inquired.

"The triangle in a circle, drawn around you, will keep off demons," I explained gravely. "Surely you know that?"

"How—convenient!"

"And that the skins of four frogs, killed on a moonless night, will make one invisible if worn as a cap? And that the spirits obey Soloman's seal—not the plant, of course! And that if you eat a stew of the eyes of a vulture, and the ear-tufts of an owl, you will be wise beyond all dreams of wisdom?"

Jane got up, and I saw that my nonsense had had its effect. She was smiling, for the first time in days.

"If you care to go out and look at the house tomorrow, William," she said, "I will go."

And perhaps Edith had sensed a situation she did not understand, for she kissed her, and as I left the room I heard her requesting Jane to bring back with her marketing some frog skins and the ear-tufts of an owl.

So this afternoon things are looking brighter. And thus does man deceive himself!

The town is very quiet tonight. The annual student exodus is almost over, although still an occasional truck goes by, piled high with trunks. The Lears intend to stay. Sulzer and MacIntyre are off for the Scottish lakes, and Cameron, I hear, is going soon to the Adirondacks, where he spends his summer in a boat, and minus ghosts, I dare say.

I have mailed him the picture today, and can only hope Jane does not miss it.

One wonders about men like Cameron. Slight, almost negligible, as is my acquaintance with him—I would not know him in a crowd, even now—there is something of Scottish dourness in him. He neither smokes nor drinks; he lives austerely and alone. He has a reputation as a relentless investigator; it was he who exposed the hauntings at the house on Sabbathday lake, in Massachusetts.

But he is a believer. That is, he believes in conscious survival after death, and I suspect that he has his own small group here. Among them little Pettingill. It would be a humiliating thought, for me, to feel that after I passed over, as they say, little Pettingill might hate me to him, in the light or a red lamp, and request me to lift a table!

Warren Halliday is on the veranda with Edith. I can hear her bubbling laughter, and his quiet, deep voice. After all, I dare say we must make up our minds to lose her some time. But it hurts.

And it will not be soon. He has not a penny to bless himself with, nor has she. I think, if I were very rich, I would provide an endowment fund for lovers.

But something is wrong with our university system. It takes too long to put a man on a wife-supporting basis. Halliday is twenty-six; he lost two years in the war, and he has another year of law. Truly, Edith will need the eyes of a vulture and the ear-tufts of an owl.

June 22.

All houses in which men have lived and suffered and died are "haunted houses." But then, all houses are haunted. Why, then, did Jock refuse to enter the house at Twin Hollows today, but crawled under the automobile and remained there, a picture of craven terror, until our departure?

Old Thomas, the gardener, met us in Oakville with the keys, and we drove out to the house. I sensed in Jane a reluctance to enter, but she fought it back bravely, and we examined it with a view to our own occupancy. It is in excellent condition and repair, although the white covers over the library furniture and in the den behind gave those rooms a rather ghostly appearance. Jane, I saw, gave only a cursory glance into those rooms, and soon after, pleading the chill inside, moved out into the sunlight.

Edith, however, was enchanted with it all, and said so. She danced through the house, shamelessly courting old Thomas, selecting bedrooms for us all, and peering into closets, and I caught up with her at last on the second floor, looking at the boat-house on the beach beyond the marsh.

"What's above it?" she asked.

"Rooms?"

"When the old sloop was in commission, the captain slept there," I told her.

"How many rooms?"

"Two, I think, and a sort of kitchenette."

"Are they furnished?"

Old Thomas, being appealed to, said they were, and Edith's face assumed that air of mysterious calculation which I have learned to associate with what she calls "an idea." Whatever it was, however, she kept it to herself, and I left her selecting a bedroom for herself, and putting into it sufficient thought to have served a better purpose.

It is a curious thing, to go into a house left, as Twin Hollows has been, without change since old Horace died, and not to find him there; his big armchair near the fireplace in the library, his very pens still on the flat-topped desk which is the only modern piece in the room, the books he was reading still in the desk rack. I had a curious feeling today that if I raised my voice, I would hear the little cough which was so often his preliminary to speech, from the den beyond.

I threw back the covering which protected the desk top, and sat down at it. Just there, in all probability, he had been sitting when the fatal attack took place. He may have felt it coming on, but there was no one to call, poor old chap. We had not been overly close, but the thought of him, writing perhaps, or reading, the sudden consciousness that all was not well, an instant of comprehension, and then the end—it got me, rather.

I think he had been reading. Among the other books on the desk was the one with a scrap of paper thrust in it to mark the place, and a pencil line drawn on the margin of the page to mark a paragraph. But it gives me rather a new line on him. I had always thought that his purchase of a house locally reputed to be haunted, a reputation considerably enhanced by the Riggs woman's tenancy, was a rather magnificent gesture of pure Calvinism.

But tonight I am wondering. The marked paragraph is in a book entitled "Eugenia Riggs and the Oakville Phenomena," and I have brought it home with me. It is a creepy sort of thing, and I find myself looking back over my shoulder as I copy it into this record.

"It is to be borne in mind that the room was always subjected to the most careful preliminary examination. Its walls were plastered, and no doors or windows (see photograph) were near the cabinet. As an additional precaution strings of small bells were placed across all possible entrances and exits, which were also closed and locked.

"It is also to be remembered that the medium herself was always willing to be searched, and this was frequently done by Madame B——. This had been done on the night when the hand was distinctly seen by all present, reaching out and touching those nearest on the shoulder, and later making the impression in the pan of soft putty left in the cabinet.

"It is to be borne in mind, too, that, except when the controls rapped for no light, there was always sufficient illumination for use to see the medium clearly. A small red lamp was found to offer least disturbance and was customarily used.

"There was occasional fraud, but there were also genuine phenomena."

The last few words are italicized.

So tonight I am wondering. Does one find, as life goes on, that the lonely human spirit revolts at the thought of eternal peace, and craves a relief in action in the life beyond? Would I not myself, for instance, prefer even coming back and lifting little Pettingill's table to the unadulterated society of the saints?

June 23.

There is a division in my family. Edith has come out with her plan, which is to "spread out," as she puts it, in the main house at Twin Hollows, and to let Warren Halliday spend his vacation at the boat-house!

"Renting it to him, I suppose?" I inquired over my breakfast bacon.

"Renting it?" she said indignantly. "You wouldn't have the nerve to ask money for that tumble-down place, would you? And anyhow, you can't get blood out of a stone."

There is a terrible frankness about Edith at times.

But Jane is as equally determined not to occupy the house at any cost. It was written all over her yesterday, and there is still an ominous set look about her mouth.

If Jane would be more open it would be easier; if she would only come to me and say that she is afraid of the house I think I could reassure her. It may be that that silly photograph is still in her mind. But why would she not even stay in the house yesterday? She went out into the garden and picked some of its neglected flowers instead.

"It's a pity not to use them," she said, and then looked at me with such a white and pitiful face that I put my arm around her.

"I must have been a very bad husband," I said, "if you think I am going to force you to live here. Who am I," I added, "against you and Jock?"

But she did not smile.

"If you want to come here," she said, making what I felt was a painful concession, "why couldn't we live at the Lodge? It is really quite sweet. And we could rent this."

So, Tonight, I Am Wondering.

"Would that be quite moral, under the circumstances? I'm not asking the circumstances," I added hastily. "I'm simply putting the question."

"We could ask a lower rent."

There is, I sometimes think, a fundamental difference in the ethical views of men and women. To Jane it is quite proper to let a house with what she believes is a most undesirable quality, if she lowers the price. She does not suggest advertising: "One house furnished, reputed to be haunted." On the contrary, she proposes to entice tenants with a lower rent, and once having got them there, to be able to say, in effect: "What would you? The house is cheap. True, it has certain disadvantages; I am sorry you have been bothered. But you have saved money."

Aside from this viewpoint, however, the idea is sound enough. We can be comfortable at the Lodge. And—let me always be frank in this Journal—I may have my occasional yearnings for adventure, but they have their limitations, and the talk Edith has reported as taking place between old Thomas and herself yesterday after I left them has revealed them to myself.

Edith, on the contrary, finds the situation "really thrilling."

"It's a good house, yes'm," said Thomas. "For them as likes it. I wouldn't be caught dead in it at night myself."

"I hope you never will be," said Edith.

"It ain't nothing you can put your finger on," said Thomas. "It's just knocks and raps, and doors opening and closing. But I say that's enough."

"It sounds like plenty," said Edith. "Of course it may be rats."

"It's a right husky rat that'll open a closed door, and I ain't yet seen a rat that could move a chair. Besides, I ain't ever heard that rats are partial to a red light."

"Now, see here, Thomas," Edith reports herself as saying, "either you've said too much or you've said too little. What about a red light?"

Stripped of further trimming, it appears that some two years ago a small red lamp was installed in the den at Twin Hollows, and is now still there. Thomas having declined to destroy it for fear of some dire and mysterious vengeance.

"Not for light, as far as I could see, miss," he said. "I never seen him read by it. But put in it was, and the night it first came Annie Cochran said something came into her room and pulled the covers off her bed."

"How—shameless!" said Edith.

Like the lady of color who said to the judge that she had "just sort of lost her taste" for her husband, I begin to lose my taste for this lamp. But one wonders whether its evil reputation is not a survival from the days of Mrs. Riggs, when "a small red lamp was found to offer least disturbance, and was customarily used."

June 24.

Edith has lost and Jane has won. We shall spend the summer at the Lodge.

But I feel that Jane's victory brings her no particular pleasure, that ever to go to the Lodge is a concession she is making against some hidden apprehension.

Edith, however, has won in one way. Warren Halliday is to have the boat-house.

We motored out together today, I to look over the Lodge more carefully, and Halliday to inspect his prospective quarters. He is thoroughly likeable, a nice clean-cut young fellow, not too handsome but manly and with a good war record, and badly cut up at his failure to find a job for the summer.

"I'd do anything," he said. "Sell neckties if necessary! But I can't even land that. Although—" he forced a grin "—I have a nice taste in neckties!"

On the way out I told him something of the history of the house, and a little—very little—of Jane's nervousness concerning it.

In view of our conversation, it was interesting later that day, at the Lodge, to have old Thomas intimate that Uncle Horace had not died a natural death, but had "seen something" which had caused it.

As a matter of fact, he brought out certain rather curious facts, which appear to have been somehow overlooked, or at least considered unimportant, at the inquest.

For instance, he had been writing at his desk when the attack came on. His pen was found on the floor. But there was no sign of what he had been writing, save for a mark on the fresh blotter, as if he had blotted something there. The most curious thing, however, according to old Thomas, was the matter of lights.

When Annie Cochran found him the following morning, on the floor beside his desk, all the lights were out, including his desk lamp.

"But the red lamp was going in the den," said old Thomas. "It didn't make much light, so nobody noticed it until the doctor came. He saw it right off. I leave it to you, what shut off that desk lamp?"

I rather gather from Thomas that the ill-repute of the red lamp has spread over the countryside. The house had a bad reputation to start with, and now comes Annie Cochran and her red lamp, and a fairly poor outlook so far as renting the property is concerned.

The Lodge proves to be weather proof and in good condition, and the boat-house quite livable, with the addition of a few things from the main house.

(Note: It is necessary, for the sake of the narrative, to describe the boat-house. It is built up on piles which raise it above tide level, and the dory and canoe belonging to the house are stored in the lower portion of it in winter. The old sloop, however, not in commission for several years, was at this time anchored to a buoy about a hundred yards out in the bay, and showed the buffetings of wind and tide.

Across the salt marsh, from the foot of the lawn, extended a raised wooden runway which led to the boat-house and the beach. This walk also prolongs itself into a sort of ramshackle pier, from which a runway extends to a wooden float. At the time of our visit examination showed the float badly in need of repair, a number of the barrels which supported it having more or less gone to pieces.

It was, as will be seen, during Halliday's repair of this float that he made that discovery which was later to see the commencement of my troubles.)

All in all, Jane's scheme is practical, although Edith is frankly disappointed.

"I would have looked so sweet on that terrace!" she says, and makes a dreadful face at me.

But she is secretly pleased. She sees herself in the cottage, in a bungalow apron, presenting a picture of lovely but humble domesticity to young Halliday, and thus forcing his hand. For if I know anything of Edith, she is going to marry him. And if I know anything of Halliday, he is going to marry nobody he cannot support.

It may be an interesting summer.

Curious about that lamp on the desk, the night the poor old chap passed out. Of course, he might have turned it out and risen to go upstairs when he felt the attack coming on. But wouldn't he have laid the pen down first? One would do that automatically.

It's a pity the blotting pad has been destroyed.

June 25.

The last, or almost the last, word Uncle Horace wrote the night of his death was "danger."

But how much significance am I to attach to that? To poor old Horace there would have been danger in overexertion; in that sense of the word he was always in danger. But it was not a word he was apt to use lightly.

Yet what conceivable danger could have threatened him? . . .

This morning, clearing my desk preparatory to our exodus, I resorted to an old trick of mine. I turned over my large desk blotter and presented a fresh and unblemished side to the world. It came to me then that thus probably since the invention of blotters had neatness been established with a minimum of effort, and that it might have been resorted to by Annie Cochran.

After luncheon I started to Twin Hollows with the back of the car piled high with a varied assortment of breakable toilet articles, a lamp or two, and a certain number of dishes. The Lodge was open, and Annie Cochran vigorously cleaning it, and having deposited my fragile load there, I wandered up to the house.

Boxwood Shrub Sells for Neat Little Sum

More than a century and a half ago a tiny boxwood was planted on the grounds of King George's tavern near Tripoli, Pa. After having grown through all that time into a sturdy and imposing shrub, it was purchased recently by Robert P. Hutchinson, president of the Bethlehem Steel Fabricators, and removed by motor truck to his spacious estate, "Kendridge," at Macada, Pa., where it is one of countless choice specimens of trees and shrubs.

The plant stands 13 feet high and has a circumference of 66 feet. To remove it required a week's careful work. The load, including soil, when the transfer was made, was about 25 tons. It is said that the financial consideration was close to $400.

U. S. Sport Phrases Are Given Peculiar Twist

Latin America has coined its own expression pertaining to baseball, and the peculiar twists given to Yankee sports phrases are echoed in all lands where Spanish is the predominant language.

Baseball is termed "beisbol" and when a swarthy batter swats out a long one and reaches home on it the term is "jonron" or home run. The pitcher is the "picher" and the catcher is the "cacher." Of course, there are Spanish appellations for bats "palos," gloves or "quantes" and the players "jugadores."

In other lines of sports there are similar copying of American names and phrases made adaptable to the Spanish by changes in spelling, often weird. For instance, football is "futbol." Efforts to change the word tennis, however, have been unsuccessful.

Orsatti Is Recalled

In recalling Outfielder Ernest Orsatti from Minneapolis, the Cardinals wanted a man who could recharge a run-down battery and from early indications Orsatti is the man to supply the punch lost by the Card regulars. Orsatti hit two homers in his first two days with the Cards and nailed a single and double in addition during his first game.

BASEBALL'S BIG SIX ARE GOLIATHS

Ruth, Fothergill, Heilman, Hogan, Buckeye, Elliott.

Lump the six of them together and they will weigh 1,280 pounds. They are the Goliaths of the diamond, the fat boys of baseball.

First comes Babe Ruth whose 210 pounds are strung out over 6 feet, 2 inches of height. When you see Babe waddle out to his position you wonder how he manages to field and run the bases. The secret lies in his legs, which are modeled after those of a greyhound. Most of Ruth's bulk is concentrated above the belt; it lies in his arms and shoulders which provide the propelling power for his home runs. The Babe's pudgy face heightens the impression that he is fat, but in reality he is the fastest big man in baseball.

Roy Fothergill isn't big; he's immense. "Fatty" is his nickname and he deserves it. Every March Fothergill is faced with the problem of losing 30 pounds. Usually he goes to Hot Springs, Ark., boils off about 15 pounds, and depends on spring training to take off the rest of his excess weight. Despite his fatness, Fothergill is a terrific hitter. His normal weight is about 200 pounds.

When Shanty Hogan reported to the New York Giants after he had been obtained in the trade which sent Rogers Hornsby to Boston, they couldn't find a belt big enough for him. McGraw finally handed Hogan a trunk strap and told him to make a belt out of it. Hogan is one of the heaviest men who ever donned a mask and mitt. His 220 pounds make it necessary for him to hit a triple if he wants to get to second base.

But the mammoth of them all is Garland Buckeye, the pitcher who was released by the Giants to Toledo of the American association the other day. Buckeye did a "Sam Vick." In other words, he ate himself out of the major leagues. Sam Vick was the first ball player to do that and when he passed, all he left in the big leagues was a handy phrase which has been used ever since. Buckeye weighs 235 pounds.

Like Ruth, Harry Heilmann of the Detroit Tigers is over the 200-pound mark, but it is chiefly muscle and bone. Heilmann, who has seen many baseball summers dawn and die, is one of the most dangerous of the long line of dangerous hitters that have worked for the Tigers. His 205 pounds send many a ball rattling against the fence.

Brooklyn contributes Jumbo Elliott, who is 200 pounds of good pitching material. Last year he was one of the most effective men on Wilbert Robinson's high-powered staff.

Gene Sarazen Gives Tip to British Golf Stars

While eminent American professional golfers were in England in quest of the open championship—which, as all know, Walter Hagen won—some of the most serious critics of golf on the other side went to school; that is to say, they went to the shore hotel at Sandwich where the Americans were staying and sat at the feet of the masters of the game.

One of these American masters stated that he does not know how much the English learned, but that certainly they got a lot of information.

Gene Sarazen made a tremendous hit with a very sage remark, which spread throughout England in the short time that elapsed between the close of the open and the sailing of the Yankee mercenaries for home.

"The difference between English and American golf," said Sarazen, "is this: When a player comes to the front in your country the first question you ask is 'How far can he drive?' The first thing we want to know about a new American star is 'What kind of a putter is he?'"

That was all Gene said, but evidently he had said all that was necessary. The English decided, by jove, that he had hit the nail on the head, and it would not be at all surprising if the long game as a compelling subject of conversation and practical demonstration in England gave way to the delicate art of putting.

If the word of a fellow who has played baseball in the parks of American, National, International and American Association leagues can be taken to mean anything—the best baseball diamond in the world is located at Polk, Pa., near Franklin and the oil fields. Any Woman Can Look Stylish

By MAE MARTIN

Most stylish-looking women are just "good managers." They know simple ways to make last season's things conform to this season's styles.

Thousands of them have learned how easily they can transform a dress, or blouse, or coat by the quick magic of home tinting or dyeing. Anyone can do this successfully with true, fadeless Diamond Dyes. The "know-how" is in the dyes. They don't streak or spot like inferior dyes. New, fashionable tints appear like magic right over the out-of-style or faded colors. Only Diamond Dyes produce perfect results. Insist on them and save disappointment.

My new 64-page illustrated book, "Color Craft," gives hundreds of money-saving hints for renewing clothes and draperies. It's Free. Write for it now, to Mae Martin, Dept. E-143, Diamond Dyes, Burlington, Vermont.

MENLO PARK

A Smith-Robinson club was organized in the Masonic Hall Tuesday evening. A fair-sized crowd was present. E. J. Crane, former postmaster of Menlo Park, was chosen president; J. B. Welsh, secretary. Miss Florence Gilbert and Miss Regina Harrington were appointed a woman's committee to interest the ladies in the district in the Smith campaign. Sixty-seven signed the membership roll. The club plans to hold weekly meetings in the Kuck hall every Tuesday evening.

James Artino arrived home this week from a three weeks' visit to the east. Artino visted his boyhood home in Chicago, where his aged mother resides. He also visited Washington and New York. He was almost overcome with the heat of the east and is glad to be back to the cooling shades and gentle zephyrs of Menlo Park.

The local Hoover club will launch a big campaign at once to secure a large membership. It is the hope of the club to get every Hoover man to the polls on November 6. Hoover is to carry Menlo Park by a substantial majority. Party lines ought to be erased at this election in order to give the candidate of the republican party a complimentary vote in his own home section. His election would mean much to this community.

William Feeley, Sr., is a true Samaritan and a public spirited citizen. The grass walk in front of the O'Hearn property on Oak Grove Avenue that greatly impeded travel of the weary pedestrians was this week cut and burned by him, making the walk a pleasant place to pass. Mr. Feeley, though crippled, gave his time and labor that others may be benefited. More humanitarian acts like this would make the old world a better place in which to live.

Mrs. Josephine Quilfelt, the pretty daughter of Mrs. Marie Larrecou of this city, was unted in marriage Wednesday at Redwood City at the home of Judge McAuliffe to Edwin Walsh of Menlo Park. The bride is one of the belles of this place and has many friends. Mr. Walsh is a son of Martin Walsh, is a graduate of Santa Clara University and is employed in an executive position at Stanford University. The young couple will reside in Menlo Park.

Commissioner Walker presented plans and specifications from the building inspector to make an addition to the local grammar school. The question arose as to whether or not it should be a Class C building as the school was in the business district. The matter was left to the city attorney to determine.

Various forms and placard to be used by the building inspector were turned over to the finance commissioner to be printed.

Chief of Police Furman was authorized to have the stop signs on the highway in front of the grammar school repainted.

District Attorney Franklin Swart was given permission to use the city hall for a meeting of the Peninsula police Officers' Association on Sept. 20.

On motion of Ellis, seconded by Blake, Ordinance No. 5 was given its first reading. It concerns the placing of advertising signs or other advertising devices upon public property except by order of the council. The city attorney was authorized to define the duties of the poundmaster under the existing ordinance and the amendment thereto.

The council adjourned to Tuesday evening, October 2.

The city council met in regular session Tuesday evening, all the members being present.

On motion of Dale seconded by Ellis, a resolution of condolence was adopted by the council and a copy was sent to Mrs. A. Partee, whose husband passed away last week.

A communication was received from the Gas Tax Association asking the council to consider sending a representative to the next legislature to assist in amending the present gas tax law so that the cities of the state would receive some of the revenue from the tax, all of which is now paid into the state and counties. The communication was received and ordered filed.

On motion of Dale, seconded by Walker, the chief of police was directed to issue a permit to Manuel Blasques to conduct a pool room in the Maloney block.

Mrs. Walta Threlkeld Sues for Divorce

Suit for divorce was filed here last Friday by Mrs. Walta Threlkeld, daughter of Walter Linfroth of Atherton, against her husband, William S. Threlkeld, charging failure to provide and cruelty.

Reports from Los Angeles declare that attorneys for Threlkeld will contest the divorce and deny the charges made by Mrs. Threlkeld. Threlkeld was manager of the stables on his father-in-law's estate prior to his marriage with Miss Linforth, who is a devoted horse woman.

F. J. Furnivall on October 1 will move his furniture store from its present location on the Highway to his newly acquired property on the corner of Oak Grove avenue and Mills avenue. It was formerly a part of the Ahlert holding.

WOODSIDE

The rural mail delivery to Woodside has been re-routed so that those who live on Albion Avenue and Miramontes Road now have delivery to their homes instead of having to walk to the Highway to collect their mail.

An exciting election at the local school this week resulted in the naming of George Dirks school football captain for the coming season. Dirks comes of a football family. His brother Clarence is captain of the team at the University of Washington and his brother Burnett is one of the chief ground gainers for ths Sequoia High.

Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Dudley returned this week from a vacation outing spent along the Redwood Highway and in southern Oregon.

Mr. and Mrs. Julian Thorne left their home on the La Honda grade on Monday and returned to their home in San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Fay and family will not return to San Francisco this year but will spend the winter at their home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Athol McBean, who have been occupying the Josselyn home for the summer, have returned to San Francisco.

The Bear Gulch Water Co. installed a new outlet pipe at their reservoir on Monday. This will take the water for the distributing system from a point nearer the middle of the lake and eliminate the sediment that has entered through the old outlet. A deep sea diver was brought from San Francisco to make the installation.

Miss Eleanor Weir, whose marriage to Mr. Heber Tilden will take place October 2nd, will be the guest of honor at a luncheon which Mrs. Merrill Morshead will give on September 25 at her home here.

Mrs. Virginia Miller, who left for Portland two weeks ago with the intention of spending the winter there, has already returned. She found the climate there not so agreeable as the climate of Woodside.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Audiffred and family left on Friday last for a short camping trip in the Sierras. They returned this week.

The first card party of the season under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher Association will be given Saturday night at the club rooms of the association.

Kansan Tells of Early Days On West Branch Farm Where Hoover Was Born

E. D. King Recalls Life in Quaint Quaker Settlement in Iowa—Lived With Candidate's Family.

E. D. King, 1216 Richmond Street, Kansas City, Kansas, has many interesting incidents to relate about the Hoover family, having himself lived in the Hoover home in West Branch, Iowa, at the time Herbert Hoover was born.

Mr. King was working for Herbert's father in the blacksmith shop at the time. It was he who went for the doctor when Herbert was born. Mr. King ate his meals with the Hoover family.

West Branch was at that time a town of about 400 population. It had two blacksmith shops, one hotel, a livery stable, four general stores, and a restaurant. It is located in Cedar County, where broad Quaker hats and poke bonnets were worn for almost a generation. Cedar county was on the western edge of the original Black Hawk Purchase which was the nucleus of the State of Iowa. Here farms bordered rougher land of hill and ravine.

According to Mr. King, Hoover was a respected name in Iowa. The family originated in Holland, but has been represented in the United States for nearly two centuries. Andrew Hoover and two brothers, about 1740, obtained land in the uplands of Maryland. Later Andrew's son, John, joined a group of Quakers and moved to the Western Reserve in Ohio.

It was in 1853 that the son of John, Jesse Hoover, Rebecca, his wife, and Eli, their son, and his three children moved farther West, helping to found the town of West Branch. The King family settled there the same year, and both families lived in log cabins for a while, later building better houses. Buffalo and deer were quite common in the vicinity at that time.

Herbert Hoover was only six years old when his father died. His mother did sewing and other kinds of work to support her children. She also took a prominent part in Quaker meetings and was invited to speak in other towns and cities. After she died Herbert and the two other children were cared for by relatives. Herbert went to live with his Uncle Allan and Aunt Millie. This Aunt Millie was, before her marriage, Myra Gifford, a first cousin of Mr. King.

Mr. King left West Branch to go on a farm in western Iowa. He later farmed in Oskaloosa, Kansas. In 1893 he came to Kansas City where he was engaged in the real estate business for some time. He is now employed in a furniture store in Kansas City, Kansas.
